An increasingly common phenomenon in the Internet age is the “urban legend,” a type of story spread rapidly via the World Wide Web. Most urban legends share the following characteristics: they are humorous and/or shocking, they claim to be true, and they make a good story. A classic example of this phenomenon is the legend of alligators inhabiting the sewers underneath New York City. According to the legend, a number of New Yorkers brought back baby alligators from vacations in Florida, but grew tired of their pets and flushed them down the toilet. The alligators survived and bred and there is now a colony of crocodiles living under the city. Most regard the story as total fiction, but there are a few who claim it is true.

Gross domestic product (GDP) is the economic term that is of most interest to theorists of macroeconomy. GDP is the total value of all goods and services produced in the economy during a specified period of time. The specified period may range from one quarter to a year. However, the total value of goods and services may change over this fixed period, either because the quantities of goods and services are changing or because their prices are changing in this specified period. As a result, economists often prefer to use real gross domestic product (real GDP) as the measure of production. The adjective real means that we adjust the measure of production to account for changes in prices over time. Real GDP, also called output or production, is the most comprehensive measure of how well the economy is doing.

42. What is the main idea of this passage?
- A. to describe the daily-life interests shared by most macroeconomists.
B. to describe how an enterprise can provide good manufactures and services.
C. to provide the domestic companies with economical strategies of making profits.
D. to define the economical terms: gross domestic product and real gross domestic product.

 - D. the trade surplus or deficits made by a single country during a given period of time
44. What does comprehensive mean in this passage?
- A. thorough
 - B. understandable
 - C. large
 - D. popular
45. What is the difference between GDP and real GDP?
- A. Real GDP is the economic measure of production that we adjust to account for changes in prices over time, while GDP does not take changes into consideration.
 - B. GDP is the economic measure of production that we adjust to account for changes in prices over time, while real GDP does not take the changes into consideration.
 - C. Real GDP is the economic measure of production that includes interests of most economists, while GDP does not.
 - D. GDP is the economic measure of production that includes interests of most economists, while real GDP does not.
46. According to the above passage, which statement in the following is true?
- A. The economists prefer to use real GDP because the estimated time is specified.
 - B. The economists prefer to use real GDP because the changes of productions and services in economy can be ignored.
 - C. The economists prefer to use real GDP because this measure is adjusted to the real changes.
 - D. The economists prefer to use real GDP because it describes the input productions also.

The report by the London-based human rights group sheds light on an area of Chinese foreign policy that its government does not disclose: assistance to regimes embroiled in international conflicts and often shunned by the West. The group said China had shipped hundreds of military trucks to Sudan and Myanmar's military, and rifles and grenades to Nepal's security forces.

China rarely confirms sales of weapons and military equipment abroad, a secrecy that is compounding U.S. concerns about how it is using its rapidly rising economic and diplomatic power abroad. Also, senior U.S. government officials have publicly criticized China for a robust military buildup at home and a lack of transparency in its defense policies. It seems that more sales of weapons conducted in secrecy will be disclosed in the near future.

47. Which in the following choices can best entitle this passage?
